The secretary takes a very decided stand on the prison labor question and reports as follows: "This is a question which should be taken up by the legislative committee immediately. For years the workers of Vermont have been trying to have the present contract system abolished. Late this morning of the federation officers appeared before the governor of Vermont and voiced their disapproval of the system and intimated to him that they had personal knowledge that a representative of the prison board had been sent to Washington to help defeat the convict prison labor bill. The governor agreed that such was the case, but stated that the purpose in view was only to amend that important measure and give the prison board time to devise other methods of employment for the prisoners.

We were asked what we would do with the prisoners when we had abolished the contract system. We told the governor that it was our belief that a representative of the prison board had been sent to Washington to help defeat the convict prison labor bill. The governor agreed that such was the case, but stated that the purpose in view was only to amend that important measure and give the prison board time to devise other methods of employment for the prisoners.
